Heart Transplantation

A short story by Dr. M.J.Rai
Senior consultant Cardiologist

Part -2

Dr. M.J. Rai

Anavind, after due deliberations with family members and myself, agreed to go on the waiting list. He knew the cost of the whole procedure would be anywhere from 15 to 25 lakhs.

Anavind had bought a 2 BHK apartment out of his savings and had moved into. Since he was unable to mobilize such a large amount, he decided to sell the apartment and move into a rented place close to the transplant hospital, since that was also a precondition. They removed their daughter from her expensive preschool and admitted her to nearby less expensive school. His parents and in laws also chipped in their might.

Two more months passed. Anavind's condition was slowly and steadily going downhill. As he was not in a position to travel up and down to his office, his company allowed him to work from home on compassionate ground.

Sensing that Anavind may not work for too long, his wife joined a job to supplement the income.

Two more months passed by. Anavind's condition was worsening rapidly. Now everybody was waiting eagerly for the transplantation to take place.

It was a Sunday morning. There was an emergency call from Rainbow hospital for Anavind to shift quickly to the hospital. Apparently a young man had a fatal road accident with severe head injury during late hours of a Saturday night. His heart was still beating although he was brain dead. The relatives had agreed for organ donation. His compatibility tests matched that of Anavind's. He was shifted from the primary care hospital to Rainbow Hospital.

Anavind's family were in cloud nine. Special prayers were offered and eaths were promised.

Anavind was admitted to ICU. After thorough preparation appropriate arterial and venous lines were inserted and the monitoring system was put in place. He was then shifted the major O.R. The donor's body was kept in the adjoining O.R. It was necessary to harvest the donor's heart first before inducing anaesthesia to the recipient.

When the main surgical team was waiting for the heart to arrive, suddenly the red light in the O.R. went on - indicating not to proceed with anaesthetizing the recipient. Apparently the donor's heart had stopped beating during the harvest. All efforts at resuscitating it had failed. Beyond a certain time, the heart would get permanent damage and there was no point in transplanting such a heart.

What a monumental disappointment! Sheer badluck!

Anavind was sent back home with an assurance to keep his name on top of the priority list.

Some more weeks passed by.

On a mid week's noon, Aravind got an SOS call from Rainbow Hospital. The message was to get admitted quickly and be ready for a transplant. Apparently a donor heart was to arrive from the Hyderabad to Bangalore airport and from there to Rainbow Hospital. The compatibility tests were matching with that of Aravind's. Aravind and his family's hopes were rekindled. He quickly transferred himself and the next moment was in the I.C.U. waiting for the heart to arrive. The atmosphere at the hospital was one of expectation and jubilation.

After An hour later the hospital received a message from the airport stating that the donor heart was diverted to Chennai city, since the condition of a recipient on the waiting list there was deteriorating rapidly.

A pall of gloom descended on Aravind and his family and Rainbow Hospital.

Once again Aravind was sent back home with an advice to be ready to be called at any moment. Two weeks later Aravind was readmitted to cardiac I.C.U for a sudden change in his heart's rhythm. He had changed from sinus (normal) to atrial fibrillation (irregularly irregular heart beats). His rhythm was brought back to normal with intravenous medication. This time around, he was advised to stay in the hospital in a special room with all monitoring facility. Since the hospital authorities didn't want him to catch infection, all precautionary measures were taken. Only his wife was allowed to stay with him. The daughter was sent to stay with the grandparents and was allowed to visit father only on Sundays.

One day a major general hospital in the city contacted Rainbow Hospital saying they had a donor who was brain dead. Apparently he had a massive cerebral hemorrhage due to rupture of a congenital berry aneurism (segmental dilatation of a medium sized intracranial artery). The hemorrhage was large and deep seated and hence not amenable to surgical suction. The patient was a young but otherwise healthy man and was in deep coma for the last one week. Neurologist, physicans and Neurosurgeon had jointly declared him as brain dead. His family had consented for organ donation. His histo-compatibility and other tests matched that of Aravind's. The plan was to shift the body to Rainbow Hospital and harvest the heart there itself.

This time around the atmosphere in Rainbow hospital was that of cautious optimism. They say third time lucky. Or is it?

The transplant teams were ready. The body was shifted to adjacent O.R. One team of Cardiologist and Cardio Surgeons started the work of harvesting the donor heart. The other team was asked to shift Aravind to the main O.R. from the I.C.U to which he had been shifted the previous day.

Outside the I.C.U, Aravind's wife Pushpa and parents and in laws were waiting with bated breath. Aravind himself had a poor night. The atmosphere of the I.C.U and the anxiety of next day's surgery had robbed his sleep despite sedation.

When the Transplant team arrived, they saw a subdued Aravind. They tried to cheer him up. He was then slowly pushed out of the I.C.U along with the IV lines and the bedside cardio monitor.

As he emerged out of the I.C.U, he saw the waiting parents and the wife. Pushpa couldn't take her fees from Aravind. Aravind asked the O.R. Staff to stop for a moment. He called Pushpa near and held her hand. He looked into her eyes and told her to be bold. Then he bade good bye to his parents and in laws.

During the transit between the ICU and the major O.R. the events that unfolded, nobody ever thought of. Suddenly the bedside cardiac monitor showed a hazy straight line with rapid beeping sound, instead of the normal ECG modulations. Aravind had suddenly changed his rhythm and dropped his D.P. He soon lost consciousness. Sensing something serious, the transplant team pushed the trolley rapidly towards the O.R. In the O.R. a series of resuscitative steps were taken by the team including D.C. shock. The ECG rhythm reappeared on the monitor for a brief period and then disappeared altogether. Isotropic drugs were pushed through the IV lines which failed to stimulate the heart muscle. The resuscitative measures were continued for the next 45 minutes. In the end it was all in vain. Aravind didn't recover consciousness at all. All efforts were abandoned and Aravind was declared brain-dead.

What an irony and reversal of fate! Instead of getting a healthy heart of a brain-dead donor, the recipient himself ends up in brain-death!

This time around the red light inside the adjacent O.R. went on and then started flickering. Instructions were given to send the harvested donor heart elsewhere.

What a colossal waste of effort, money and time! And what amountainous expectation and oceanic disappointment!! And what an agony!!!

The eternal truth that man only proposes and it is God who disposes- once again proved to be right.

Environment protection is our responsibility

Preetha P. Shetty

Environment in a simple sense is a cradle of all the beings in the earth. The land in which we live, the air we breathe, the water which we drink, are the beautiful gifts for us which is provided by the environment. In a note, environment can be described as the lifeline of all the species. The trees are the medium of fruits and flowers; it is a habitat to more than 1000's species. Environment gives us immense joy and satisfaction. It refreshes our mind, moreover, environment provides us oxygen to breathe and a beautiful light to our eyes. The question which arises is whether we are equally hostile to the environment in return?

Today human is obtaining his growth in selfishness. In the economic sphere, he has completely forgotten the most precious value i.e. humanity. He has turned a cruel mind towards the beautiful creation i.e. environment. Just to gain few pounds we are cutting millions of trees. Humans are cutting trees indiscriminately in order to bring urbanisation into process. But he is not noticing that by doing so, he is paving a way to global warming. Burning of fossil fuels would result in the liberation of harmful gases such as SO_2 , CO_2 , CO etc. These gases are not only harmful for environment but may also cause critical diseases. When sulphur dioxide and nitrogen dioxide is liberated, it would result in formation of "acid rains".

This article won the first prize in the 'Future Writers' category of the 'Write competition'.

No doubt, that it is our duty to save and protect our environment. More than being a responsible citizen, it is important to be a good human who would have concern about the environment. For this, we are blessed with some of easy measures which can be implemented and would also bring a huge change. First of all, adopting 3R principles i.e. "Reuse", "Reduce" and "Recycle", is a best way to save environment. Reusing certain things would really make a sense in protecting our environment. Recycling things such as metals would help us to save our renewable resources. Just don't go with the latest fashion of buying all the cheap clothes that would wear out quickly. If possible, searching for virgin companies which has less carbon printing is the best. Reusing and reutilizing the materials would help in saving the environment to some extent. Using public transport, switching off lights when not in use, repairing the leakage taps as soon as possible are few steps which would mean a lot if we adopt them. Don't contribute waste to islands of our oceans because proper disposal of waste is very much needed to keep our surroundings clean. We would just try to be conservative activists.

We could also sponsor an animal for protection to enrich our biodiversity. Just adopting these measures is not sufficient. If we see anyone harming our environment, we should stop them from doing so. As Albert Einstein said "world would not be destroyed by those who do evil, but by those who watch them doing so which would definitely harm our world". It would become difficult to feel motivated to save environment unless we feel attached to it. So, take time to appreciate "Environment".

In modern world, economy has overgated the environment. People fail to think that without economy will world sustain to some extent but without environment it is impossible. If economy is more important than environment just by holding your breathe when you count your money. Hence, economy cannot be sustained without environment.

To sum up, it is vital that we should act more to bring changes. Hence to protect and save our environment our contribution is must. So, "Adopt a plan, get out of your house and save water" why not try? Our ultimate aim should not be to protect our environment rather to create a world where environment does not need any sort of protection. So, just do not let our beloved earth to get belovled off.
